Coffee – Did You Know?

Coffee, like chocolate and cola drinks, contains caffeine, a drug that is believed to be as addictive as nicotine or alcohol. Caffeine can cause headaches, stomach-aches and make you irritable as well as preventing you from enjoying a good night's sleep.

Nowadays, many people prefer to drink decaffeinated coffee (coffee that has had the caffeine removed), but real coffee lovers complain that this affects the taste of the coffee.

Coffee trees only grow in tropical and sub-tropical lands. They need a temperature of between 65 and 70 degrees Fahrenheit and annual rainfall of between 40 and 120 inches, although dry weather is needed for harvesting.

Coffee trees grow best on hills because this allows the water to drain away – coffee trees do not like to get their feet wet! Volcanic soil produces the best crop.

There are three main varieties of coffee trees: Arabica, originally found in Ethiopia, produces the best quality beans and is the most widely cultivated at high altitudes; Liberica comes from Liberia and grows best below 2000 feet; the third variety, Robusta, is a very strong plant that does not need much tending and is ideal for 'instant' coffee.

Coffee originated in Ethiopia where it grew wild in the humid climate, but it was not introduced into Europe until the seventeenth century, when Coffee Houses became popular meeting places. Women, however, were not allowed in the Coffee Houses of England at that time.

In seventeenth-century Germany, only members of the royal court were permitted to drink coffee and the king sent spies called 'coffee-smellers' into the street with orders to punish any ordinary people found roasting coffee!
